

Flip-a-Tyrant! — Fact Sheet

Available now on the App Store and Google Play

What it is: A satirical arcade game. Cartoon tyrants pop up from holes in a field and run for the stage; you flip them away with a tap. Each time a tyrant reaches the stage they take control of the bully pulpit and spread their propaganda with their entourages, including bodyguards, backup dancers, bears, and banners with their political slogans. Pursue your first campaign victory at level 30 and then continue as long as you can hold out. Three difficulty settings.

The tyrants: Every one is an invented type: the Propagandist, the Rebel Leader, the People's Colonel, El Presidente, Il Bombasto, and more are revealed as you climb.

Price: Free. No ads, ever. No data collected, no account, no sign-in. Optional Game Tokens for power-ups: $0.99, $4.99 or $9.99 packs, or earn them for free by playing the game.

Release: Released October 28, 2026 for iPhone and iPad; now on Android too. Available in the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom

Platforms: Available now on iPhone and iPad (App Store) and Android (Google Play)

Who made it: Antisthenes LLC is a one-person studio founded in July 2026. Its founder often wonders if a more technological world will strengthen tyrants' grip on power, or if it will help people avoid tyranny — probably some of both.

How it was made: The concept, the mechanics and every design decision are the founder's. The code was written using AI coding tools, and some of the art was made with AI image tools, both working to his explicit instructions.

The satire: No character is a real person and no flag belongs to a real country. The tyrants are always the joke.
